SMITH, DALTON AND TWESTEN ELECTED

The voters of Daly City, in a most decisive manner, last Monday endorsed the present city administration when they retured to office Mayor H. H. Smith and Councilmen A. J. Dalton and Julius Twesten.

A large number of voters went to the polls as there had been considerable interest in the campaign, which although comparatively free from rancor, was nevertheless interesting in many ways.

The different candidates presented their arguments for recognition before the voters, and a decision has been rendered which is regarded as an approval of the past conduct of the city's affairs. The voters evidently believed that the right men were on the job, and decided to keep them in their present positions.

The Record feels that the voters of Daly City have made no mistake. The officials chosen have demonstrated their ability to conduct the affairs of this municipality in a capable manner, and their retention in office comes as a fitting recognition and reward for their faithful services.

Mayor H. H. Smth was accorded the largest total of votes, 1,311 citizens marking their ballots in his favor.

The City Council will canvass the returns next Monday night.

The successful candidates, Mayor H. H. Smith and Councilmen A. J. Dalton and Julius Twesten, have requested the publisher of the Record to thank the voters of Daly City for their expression of confidence, and assure the people of Daly City that they will be found as usual working for the best interests of all the people of Daly City at all times during the time they are called upon to serve as members of the City Council.

At Atherton the three incumbent City Councilmen, J. A. Donohue, Edward L. Eyre, and Clarence Walter, were returned to office.

Menlo Park voters elected Eugene J. Crane, W. E. Dale and Alfred H. Anderson to the City Council, and J. W. Ryan, who was unopposed, city treasurer. One of the present members of the City Council, John C. Ellis, was defeated.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS SEEK CORRECT COUNT

To the People of Daly City:

The time for the census enumeration is almost closed. If you have not been enumerated, fill out your blank and mail or take it to the City Hall in Daly City, not San Francisco. We want a complete count of our town and only by co-operation can this be done. The enumerators are working night and day to complete this huge task and your assistance is needed.

GEN. PERSHING P. T. A. ENTERTAINS KIDDIES

The General Pershing P. T. A. entertained 287 kiddies at a theatre party given Saturday, April 12, at the Daly City Theatre. After the show the children were served ice cream and cup cakes. The committee wish to thank the donor of the cakes for the party. This is the last party to be given for the children by the outging officers, and, if appearances were not deceiving, it was a grand success. One small urchin with ice cream in one hand and cake in the other, remarked: "Gee, this is a regular party." So be it; they were the judges.

Instalaltion of the new officers for the coming year will take place in the General Pershing P. T. A. room on Monday, April 21, at 1:30 P. M. Miss Roussell, district president, will act as installing officer, and Prof. W. J. Savage, district superintendent of schools, will be the speaker of the day. Let us hope that a large number will attend to welcome the new officers.

An auditors' meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Lillian Fletcher, outgoing president, on Thursday, April 10, and the books were audited and closed for the past year.

One of the social events for next week will be a whist party to be held at the home of Mrs. E. Boyle, 131 Winchester street, on Wednesday, April 23, at 2 o'clock. The whist is being given for the purpose of raising funds toward the maintenance of the Daly City Well Baby Clinic. The public is cordially invited.—Mrs. E. F. Deskins, Publicity Chairman.

Special Easter exercises will be the feature of the Sunday school hour Easter morning at the Daly City Methodist Episcopal church, Vista Grande and Santa Barbara avenue. Those planning to attend this program are asked to come promptly at the time set for opening, 10 o'clock, as the program is a full one, with songs, recitations, and other features, all of which will seek to convey and interpret the meaning of the Easter story.

The Methodist people are uniting with other groups in an early morning community Easter service on the hills. These exercises will be held about 7 o'clock.

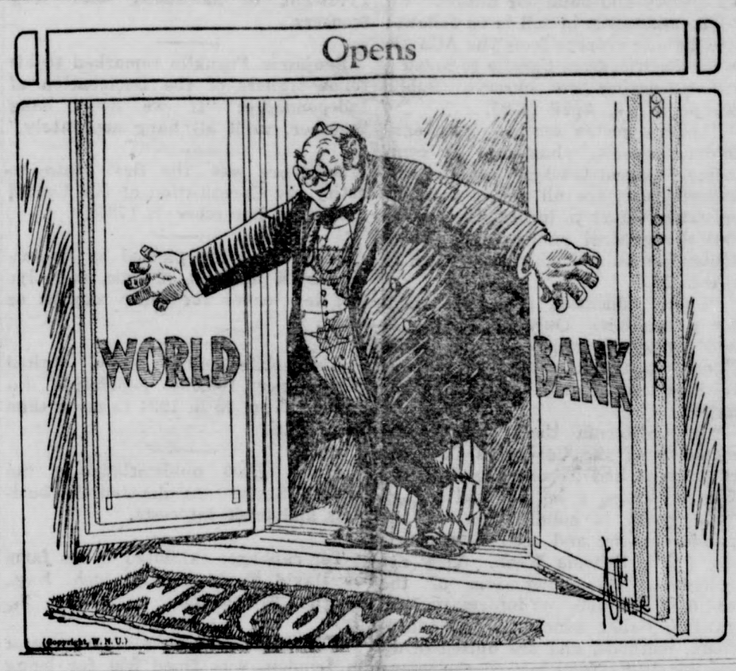
STORM CAUSES DEATH OF MAN

At least one death and a score of minor accidents followed in the wake of the storm which descended on San Mateo county Sunday night, bringing with it an inch of rain. The downpour in places reached the volume of a cloudburst and flooded streets of communities throughout the county.

The death was that of F. P. O'Brien of San Francisco, killed when his car skidded on San Pedro mountain and went over the side of the road. A score of minor auto accidents were reported to police.



TO DEDICATE NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

The dedication of the new auto mechanics building of the Jefferson Union high school will be the leading event at the high school on Thursday evening, April 24. There will be presented a formal program which is being prepared for the occasion. This will consist of such numbers as music by the high school students and short addresses by leaders in labor and education such as Mr. James Mullin, editor of the Labor Clarion, San Francisco, and a representative of the State Department of Education who will come from Sacramento for the occasion. The high school pupils will give a demonstration of regular work similar to that done in the day and evening classes, and patrons will have an opportunity to see the students in action and the machinery in motion. This work will consist of auto repairing in all of its phases, battery and tire repairing, lathe and forge work, etc.

The High School Parent-Teachers Association will act as hosts on the occasion and it is hoped that every tax payer of the district, as well as every patron of the high school, will be in attendance.

Next week is to be observed throughout the schools of California as Education Week. Varied programs will be given in the schools for the purpose of having the parents visit the class rooms and get in closer touch with the work that is being done by the teachers in the interests of the pupils. It was decided by the high school board and Principal James Ferguson that no more appropriate observance of Education Week could be made than by formally dedicating the new shop building and having the patrons of the school see the building and equipment in this department of the high school with the classes actually at work.

The pupils of the high school have done a most creditable piece of work in roadmaking and grading the grounds. This has all been done in anticipation of the formal opening and dedication of the new building.

On behalf of the board of education, the Parent-Teacher Association, and the entire high school, Principal James Ferguson gives a most urgent invitation to every one in the district to visit the school on this occasion.

POPULAR BUSINESS WOMAN IS CALLED BY GRIM REAPER

Mrs. Clarice Olson, of the Community Realty Company, passed away at St. Mary's hospital, San Francisco, last Wednesday night, April 16, after a brief illness.

Her death comes as a distinct shock to her many friends in this community, but few of whom knew that she was not in her usual good health. Mrs. Olson conducted a successful real estate business, and was popular in business and social circles.

Her brother in Seattle was notifed of her passing, and no arrangements for the funeral services will be made until word has been received from him.

EDUCATION WEEK PLANS FOR NOVEMBER BEGUN

Already various states and localities have begun to plan programs for the tenth annual American Education Week, which will be observed November 10-16, according to the April Journal of the National Education Association. The purpose of this week is to acquaint the public with the activities, ideals, achievements, and needs of the schools.

The program during this week will emphasize, as in former years, the seven cardinal objectives of education and will have for each day a suitable theme for special emphasis. This program, which is also used in other countries, will be adapted by each nation, state or community to its particular needs.

FINAL TANFORAN RACES TOMORROW

Tanforan's inaugural racing meet will close tomorrow (Saturday) with one of the finest programs yet presented by the Pacific Coast Breeders Association at the San Bruno sporting green. The feature of the closing session tomorrow (Saturday) will be the San Mateo Handicap in which some of the finest horses on the American turf will be entered.

The track closed all day to-day (Friday) in observance of Good Friday.

The farewell program will be augmented by a unique entertainment when the army will stage its air maneuvers over Mills field. These maneuvers will be plainly visible from the stands in Tanforan.

Another interesting feature of the closing day will be a race for three-year-olds in which such horses as Jim Dandy will be entered. Jim Dandy is a candidate for entry in the Kentucky Derby and is now in training for this great track classic. He will attract wide interest in followers of the turf.

During the past week many unexpected upsets were recorded at the track, one of the most outstanding being the victory of Tea Barry, belonging to the Spellman stables. Tea Barry, a rank outsider, stepped out in front with a beautiful finish and passed under the barrier to win.

More than 100 disabled American veterans were guests of the racing association Tuesday and inspected the great track plant.

It was learned yesterday that the breeders asociation is planning for a return meeting to be held in the fall. While the association has made no official announcement, the report comes from sources considered highly reliable. It is known, however, that the association has been considering a return meeting for some time.

The splendid response of horse racing enthusiasts to the meeting now in progress will undoubtly bear great weight in any consideration for a return meeting.

Officials of both the association and the meeting have expessed great pleasure over the fine support accorded their efforts to stage a high-class meeting. Judge Joseph A. Murphy, presiding steward of the meeting, has kept the races on an unusually high plane, and all those engaged in the conduct of the racing have been of the best calibre experts obtainable. The crowds have given evidence that the best people in San Francisco, San Mateo and other bay counties really want racing under the plan that has been in force at Tanforan.

It is expected that 25,000 persons will see the races and air show at the San Bruno racing green tomorrow (Saturday). Ample space is available to handle the parking of a much greater crowd.

Dr. Callsen is well known in Daly City, being a successful practicing dentist, and a leader in civic affairs, well known for his progressiveness, as well as being one of the most popular men in Daly City.

The appointment of Dr. Callsen to the position of health officer will no doubt meet with the hearty approval of the people of Daly City.

NEXT SUNDAY'S SERVICES AT CALVARY BAPTIST CHAPEL

The following will be the services at Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street, next Sunday:

In the morning: "The Undisturbed Grave Clothes of Jesus."

In the evening: "There will be a specially prepared Young People's service, carrying out the idea of Easter and its religious meaning. It will be a service of music, dramatization and interesting short addresses.

At the resurrection of Jesus it meant that death had at last been conquered. For the first time the power of the grave had been broken and it had given up its prey, not as in miracle by a divine command from without, but by its own overthrow. His resurrection meant the overthrow of death. He has become the captain of our Salvation. It proved that God accepted and placed thus the seal of His approval on His work of redemption. We might not know that this was after all the Son of God, without the resurrection. Other men have given their lives for the truth, others have seemed divine in the eyes of their infatuated followers, but Christ's resurrection is the confirmation of that which we already know, that He is different.

Christ's conquest of the grave gave to the world "The Gate of Life." This gate is well pictured by a poet who represents one coming up to a gate on a mountain-side, over which was written the words, "The Gate of Death," but when he touched the gate opened, and he found himself amid great brightness and beauty. Then, turning about, he saw above the gate he entered the words, "The Gate of Life." This illustrates that if we are in Christ, death is abolished, and the point which earth calls the point of death is really the point of life.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Friends of Mr. Ed Byrne, of Bellevue avenue, gathered at his home last Saturday evening, about 8:30, and gave him a surprise party in honor of his birthday. The evening was spent playing progressive whist. At midnight delicious refreshments were served at an artistically decorated table. The center of attraction was the birthday cake. The decorations were pink and white. Those who enjoyed this pleasant evening were Mrs. J. L. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. John Eason, Miss Betty Blossom, Mrs. D. Kraus, Mr. Elmer Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Davis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Caine, Mr. and Mrs. E. Byrne.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT

Mrs. Virginia Edwards, of Bosworth street, a charter member of Vista Grande Circle of the Druids, mother of Mrs. Ethel Adams, of Peoria street, had the misfortune to fall on the steps at her home, Saturday of last week, and broke her foot.

ANOTHER ROAD OUT OF BELMONT

The board of supervisors last Monday granted to the city of Belmont a section of unincorporated, unnhabited land south of the city through which the Harbor boulevard runs. In exchange for the closing of another crossing formerly used by the city.

The Harbor boulevard will give the city of Belmont through thoroughfare from El Camino Real to Bayshore highway, which is now being extended from San Mateo through Belmont to Redwood City.

The supervisors were urged to be represented at a meeting of the California committee on public safety in Oakland April 24 and 25. The purpose of the meeting will be to study the highway accident situation in the state and formulate some plans to cut down the heavy toll now taken by highway traffic annually.

Prominent leaders and officials from all parts of the state will be present at the two-day session in Oakland, and the delegates attending will be given a comprehensive report on the accident toll. An interesting program has been arranged and the committee anticipates a large attendance.

The Millbrae lighting situation was postponed for another week at the request of Supervisor Thomas Hickey.

The board also postponed action on the Menalto Park street improvement program, having advertised for bids and received none thus far.

The county engineer was authorized to have the bridge over Alpine creek at the entrance of Memorial park widened to 30 feet.

After approving numerous claims the board adjourned to meet next Monday.

The Sunday school will also have Easter exercises and the children will take part, telling the story of the First Easter Morning in poetry and play. The Sunday school will meet at 10 A. M.

STUDENT FLYERS CRASH IN MID-AIR

Two student fliers are recovering from injuries after a sensational leap for their lives Saturday, when their planes collided in mid-air over the Curtis-Wright field at Beresford.

William F. Dohrmann, San Francisco, and Henry Michaels, of Atherton, were flying over the Beresford field about 3,000 feet up, when they lost sight of each other for a few minutes. The next thing they knew there was a crash as the wings of their planes became entangled. The ships went out of control and both pilots took to their parachutes. A few minutes before they reached the ground they saw their planes crash in wreckage below them.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT ON SKYLINE BOULEVARD

Frank P. O'Brien, aged 24, of Castle Manor avenue, San Francisco, was killed Sunday night in an automobile accident on the Skyline boulevard. Edward Houle and Miss Muriel Kilgore were injured.

Having run out of gasoline, the machine in which the three were riding was parked on the highway. They hailed a passing motorist who agreed to push them down the incline. In some unexplained manner, according to Constable S. A. Landini, and Traffic Officer Otto Schramm, who investigated the accident, the car plunged off the side of the road.

ARREST HALTS HONEYMOON

His honeymoon interrupted by arrest on grand theft charges brought by Mrs. Carmelita Kendall, one of the heirs of a $1,000,000 San Carlos estate, Clyde Claude Warren, former Peninsula social figure, will be returned from New York by San Francisco detectives. Mrs. Kendall, one of the heirs of the Carmel Fallon estate which once included a large part of the Peninsula, alleges that Warren induced her to invest $51,000 in a Mexican scheme for making fish meal. The complaint was lodged shortly after Warren went to Scotland on his honeymoon.

AND NOW—SHALL WE GO FORWARD?

Only one of every ten towns shows an outstanding growth record; and over one-half the towns in the United States are remaining stationary or actually losing ground. The fundamental law of the "survival of the fittest" is being evidenced throughout our nation in this problem of community growth.

Taking a look around our own state, our own territory, we can see that changes have taken place in the standings of our neighboring towns. Have we changed? Yes, we have. But—has it been for the better or for the worse? And will it be for the better or for the worse as we continue to change in the future We can control this to a large extent. Let's think it over and see what needs to be done and what to do.

With the rapid rise of many towns and cities there has been brought about a type of competition that is new with this generation—a competition among communities. Community competition is not a myth—it is a dire reality. One has but to glance through the pages of our magazines to find states and cities proclaiming their advantages to the world, in the hope that they may attract new people and new industries to their community.

The fact that the business and professional men of the community have gotten together to foster community enterprises is a sign that Daly City will not suffer from the march of time. We can intensify our spirit, build up our trade territory, and grow. Possibly in population. Positively in enthusiasm. And surely in prosperity.

Daly City is in the midst of this competitive struggle of progress. We cannot afford to shut our eyes to the developments going on about us. We must guard against community "dry-rot." We must register a gain in our next census.

In order for Daly City to grow, it must deserve to grow. The surest way of deserving growth is to insure a sound foundation for the growth. Just as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a community can be no stronger than the weakest factor in its community organization. We must study our weaknesses and properly strengthen them. We must DESERVE to be a successful community. This done, we shall go forward.

We have the path charted before us. Let's follow it.

All together, for a bigger and more prosperous Daly City.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

The eleventh annual observance of Public Schools Week in California begins Monday, April 21. The question has frequently been asked: What is the purpose of Public Schools Week?

Primarily, our schools today are trying to teach the great fundamentals of human living. These have always been the objectives of education; but a changing and more modern world has forced upon us sharper necessities for efficient action and for clearer thinking.

There are those of the older generation who still judge education by the traditional "Three R's."

In the newer educational day the three R's still remain the fundamentals of education, but it is because of the newer ideas in education that the annual public schools week is celebrated to bring the newer school methods into relation with parents of the days of the original "Three R's."

Modern school men, and those interested in the educational responsibilities of our present generation of pupils, center their work on these major principles, all with definite relation to the "Three R's."

Character development, because character determines the nature of the impulse of the growing child; health and physical efficiency, because the training of children in healthful living is one of the most ancient of educational objectives; good citizenship, because it is important that our children learn the practice of good citizenship while still in school; training for home life; vocational efficiency, by which it gives training in the handcrafts and practical arts; the worthy use of leisure, because without adequate recreational features no educational system could be possible in this newer day, and general mental efficiency, which means the ability to concentrate and to think clearly.

Throughout the general scheme of public schools week, by school exhibits, addresses, and other graphic presentations, these objectives are exemplified for the benefit of parents and the community at large for the better understanding of the educational principles underlying the modern training of our young men and women during the formative periods of their lives.

ENDORSE OBSERVANCE OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

In a statement addressed to the 181,000 members of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Robert L. Cardiff, state president of the organization, urges the fullest co-operation by the membership, as well as the public at large, to the forthcoming eleventh annual observance of public schools week, beginning April 21.

Mrs. Cardiff states that "public education is the talisman for a republic. Only by intelligent and continued support of our wide-flung educational system can we hope to hold our liberty and build our nation."

The statement in full is as follows:

"Patriotic citizens from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to Mexico, are preparing to observe Public Schools Week, April 21-25.

"Lodges, men's service clubs, educators, schools, chambers of commerce, parent-teacher associations, and churches are all united in a co-operative effort to inform themselves and the general public as to school achievements, and what they mean to citizenship.

"Public education is the talisman for a republic. Only by intelligent and continued support of our wide-flung educational system can we hope to hold our liberty, and build our nation.

"In California there are 181,000 members of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, and in the United States, a million and a half. This group is solidly back of the public schools, and actively supporting Public Schools Week. They are recognized as being one of the valuable channels for information regarding public education and educational methods, and are united in directing their efforts toward the proper observance of this occasion."

In previous years parent-teacher organizations over the state have always taken a leading part in the annual observance of the week.

Nominations are closed, says G. C. Covill, of Detroit, who won a $20,000 ideal home in a contest and has been besieged by women who wanted to share it with him. He announces his engagement to Miss Margaret Graham, a Scotch lassie of St. Thomas, Ontario.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who is said to have faked his stories of climbing Mt. McKinley and discovering the North Pole, has been paroled from the Federal prison in Leavenworth, where he has served several years for fraud. One paragrapher remarked that folks wouldn't even believe that he had been in there.

A GRUESOME HOBBY

Most persons have a hobby of some sort, but the strangest that has come to our attention is that of Phil Hana, a farmer of White county, Illinois, whose hobby is hanging people. According to a writer in Grit, Hana has hanged 51 men within 51 years.

Stange to say, Hana is said to be a very humane man; in fact, he declares that he hangs people "out of a humanitarian interest and a desire to help sheriffs who have no experience." He has a horror that some nervous sheriff might bungle a hanging job and cause the condemned man needless suffering.

Therefore, when he hears of a man condemned to be hanged he offers his expert services to the sheriff concerned without a fee, frequently even paying his own expenses to the place of execution. It is said that he has performed this service for sheriffs in Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Arkansas.

Hana has a complete hangman's outfit with the exception of the gallows itself, including ropes, black caps and straps to bind the condemned man's arms and legs, which he carries with him on his engagements. He says that he arranges all details so carefully that death is almost instantaneous.

As souvenirs of his gruesome hobby Hana has newspaper clippings telling the story of each execution at which he officiated and other relics. He also has a large collection of "black hand" letters threatening to kill him, to dynamite his home, and to kidnap his family, but no attempts have ever been made to carry out these threats, and he says these letters never worry him.

Revolting as Hana's hobby appears at first glance, it may be a commendable one after all. If he has really saved condemned wretches from prolonged agony, who can say that he has not performed a humanitarian service?

LEGION PLEDGES AID TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The co-operation of the American Legion of California was pledged today to Public Schools Week, beginning April 21, by Clarence L. Kincaid, Department Commander for the Legion, in a letter to Charles Albert Adams, chairman of the State committee for the week.

In his pledge of co-operation Commander Kincaid said:

"You may depend upon our complete and whole hearted support in this movement. We of the American Legion are deeply interested in every movement which has as its objective the furtherance of the public school educational system.

"You are doing a splendid work in this connection and if we can be of any further assistance to you do not hesitate to command us."

The support of the school department of the State to the observance of the week has likewise been pledged through Vierling Kersey, State Director of Education.

In a letter to all county, city and district superintendents as well as high school principals, Kersey said:

"Public Schools Week, 1930, has been set for the week beginning April 21st. This annual observance has assumed such importance and valuable proportions for public education that this year we are giving it special consideration.

"The purpose of Public Schools Week is to call to the attention of citizens what the schools are doing. As a result of this attention we hope to have developed added interest on the part of all citizens, correct information in the hands of all citizens and favorable attitude toward public education in the minds of all citizens."

That Wisconsin man who was fined for petting his own wife in public should have known that such unconventional conduct would not be tolerated.

A new gold strike was reported from the White River country, scene of the state's early great mining activities. Quartzite, assaying as high as $125 a ton in gold and $3.80 in silver, has been taken from the field by Dan Richardson and Bob Guthrie of Porterville. Another quantity of ore has been shipped to the Selby smelters in San Francisco to be assayed.

B. B. Meek, state director of public works, and members of the California Highway Commission will be guests of the Fresno County Chambers of Commerce at Fresno the latter part of April, it was announced following a meeting of the board of directors of the chamber. A tour of inspection of San Joaquin Valley highways and the Kings River Canyon highway is planned by the commission in the same week.

The Contra Costa County Taxpayers' Association announced that efforts were being made to obtain a budget expert from the state association to assist in going over the Contra Costa County budget as it is being drafted this year.

According to a summary prepared by Captain C. W. Fisher, industrial manager of Mare Island, it appears there is no necessity of fearing a shortage of work at the yard. Reconditioning and scraping of the thirty-four destroyers will continue for three months yet, providing a steady supply of work. There is yet seven months' work to be done toward the completion of the submarine V-6, while the cruiser Chicago, will not be finished for a year.

Spectators at the California State Fair will have the opportunity of seeing polo matches along with other entertainment. Construction of a turf field at the exhibition grounds has been announced by Charles W. Paine, secretary manager of the fair.

Martinez-Benicia Ferry & Transportation Company applied to the Railroad Commission for a certificate to operate a ferry over the Carquinez Straits between Martinez and Benicia for the transportation of vehicles and pedestrians. A franchise has been granted by the supervisors of Contra Costa County for such ferry operations. The firm has been operating a public ferry between these points for the last 15 years and desires a certificate for the purpose of protecting its operative rights.

Plans for the formation of a seven-county highway district to construct an improved highway from Yosemite Valley through Cottonwood pass to Morro Bay and Pismo will be discussed at a meeting of county supervisors and members of the State Highway Commission at Fresno. Counties involved in the project are Kings, San Luis Obispo, Kern, Fresno, Madera and Mariposa. Tulare County will also be asked to take part in the program.

Gold still lures hundreds of seekers of the precious metal to California's foothill country and riverbeds, and the amount of metal recovered since the discovery cry was first heard in 1848 reaches the staggering total of $1,832,071,329. And there is plenty left in the hills and streams of California. Although there was a decline in the 1929 production due to the inactivity of lode mine and dredges, this year should witness a large increase as most of these operations, which represent some of the largest in the state are again operating. Amador County continues to lead the California counties in gold production. In 1928 this county produced a total of $2,236,922. Figures for California gold production for 1929 are now being compiled for every producing county in the state.

Architect Harold Burket has been authorized by the County Board of Supervisors to proceed with working drawings for the first unit of the proposed Matilija Tuberculosis Preventorium to rise in the Derby ranch section for Ventura county. Second place in the national fire-prevention contest for cities of 20,000 and under has been awarded the Chula Vista fire department. More than 400 cities were in the class with Chula Vista. "Annual clean-up days have meant much in keeping down fire losses," said Charles E. Smith, Chula Vista fire chief, "and the schools are co-operating 100 per cent. The rigid inspection of buildings also has helped." In 1923 the per capita fire loss was $140 and in 1928 it had been reduced to only 39 cents, according to Chief Smith.

Plans for the fourth annual water carnival and regatta to be held by the San Joaquin Water Carnival and Regatta Association were completed at a meeting in Stockton recently. Henry J. The mining ground is located in the Washington district, a few miles below Rocky Bar, where thousands of dollars were extracted by various mining methods in the past. W. D. Foster, original owner of the tract was content to farm the ground and consistently refused to sell for mining purposes. A large dredger has been trucked to the location and 2200 feet of 36x48 inch flume will be constructed to bring the water necessary for the operations. The job will take five carloads of lumber.

Protest against certain types of dangerous patients committed by courts to the state narcotic hospital at Spadra was made before Governor Young's council by Earl E. Jensen, director of institutions. In many instances, confirmed addicts with long criminal records sent to Spadra should have been sentenced to federal institutions, Mr. Jensen declared. "We continue to receive patients who, in our opinion, should never come to us," reported Jensen. "These cannot be benefited by treatment, as their record and history does not indicate a desire for cure. This is the type causing most of the trouble at Spadra."

Electric welding will be employed in place of rivets to put the ship together. The launch will be thirty-two feet long and will have a draft of three feet. It will be powered by a sixty-horsepower motor.

With installation of proper apparatus and appointment of Miss Pansy Bowen of Visalia as official weather observer for the Federal Department of Commerce, twenty-four-hour weather service has been inaugurated at the Visalia airport.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

STORY FROM THE START

Introducing some of the people of the pretty little French-Canadian village of Peribonka, particularly the Crippled Lady, idol of the simple inhabitants. Paul Kirke is a descendant of a sister of Molly Brant, sister of Joseph Brant, great Indian chief. He has inherited many Indian characteristics. His father is a powerful New York financier. Paul marries Claire Durand, daughter of his father's partner. He is in charge of engineering work near Peribonka. Paul's wife is in Europe. She dislikes the woods. Paul becomes interested in Carla, village teacher. Paul writes his wife to join him. Carla's mother, long an invalid, dies. Claire announces her intention of joining Paul on the Mistassini. She writes a letter of sympathy to Carla. Paul becomes aware of a gulf between him and his wife. Paul, Claire, Carla and two friends make up a luncheon party to visit the "Big Gorge" of the Mistassini.

"I can almost fancy walking upon it without wetting my shoes, it is so firm and substantial looking," persisted Claire.

"Did you ever stand on a mountain top and look down into the clouds and think how nice it would be to jump off into one of the cozy little nests they make?" asked Lucy-Belle. "I have. Once I think I might have done it if Colin hadn't held me. He says I would have had another mile to go after I hit the cloud. But this down here doesn't appeal to me like a nice, white cloud all filled with feathers. It makes me think of a—a big boa constrictor running into a hole! I wouldn't try to walk on it, or jump into it, unless Colin fell in first and I had to help him."

"Would you—then?" asked Paul.

Lucy-Belle meditated for a moment.

"Of course I would," she said. "Do you suppose I would let him go into that tunnel alone?"

"I—wonder. Life is a precious thing. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it is more precious than the person we live with. We don't idealize the women who burn themselves on their husbands' funeral pyres in India. Do we?"

"I don't think so. Their sacrifice was inspired by duty and a religious faith. Neither takes the place of love. But if Colin were down there, going to a death like that, I would want to go with him. I would go. I cannot explain it. Isn't there a difference?"

"Yes—a difference that is infinite," said Claire. "In this instance a woman would be joining the man she loved in a final hour of life, that they might be together in the supreme moment. It would be choosing between a few more minutes with him or a few more years without him, and minutes measured by love are more priceless to a woman than years without it."

"Also to a man," said Derwent, holding his wife's hand closely for a moment. "I don't think we would hesitate to take the leap. Do you, Paul?"

"No."

He was looking at Carla, who was gazing meditatively upon the viscous sweep of water below them. She looked up almost in the moment his glance went to her. Her lips moved, as if for an instant she were on the point of speaking to him, and to him alone. Then she caught herself, and turned her gaze to the river again.

"A woman's love for a man isn't always like that," she said, and something in her voice strangely thrilled Paul. "I think there is a love so great that it is cowardly for it to deliberately die, a love so complete that when its other half goes there is still heaven left in memories of it. It is wicked to take the breath of human life from such a love because of a selfish desire not to live alone. I think, Lucy-Belle, if it came to the real test God would give you strength to hold yourself back. You would not die. You would live, and cherish the memories of your love like a garden of beautiful flowers."

It was as if a cathedral bell had tolled softly among them, so wonderfully gentle and strange was Carla's voice. Carla knew. That was the thought which gripped Paul, and it held the others. She had passed through the fire at which his wife and Lucy-Belle were only guessing, and it was from her soul, not her lips, that evidence had come. Claire gave a little start at his side, and her face and eyes grew suddenly and vividly filled with light as she looked at Carla, as if all in a second a great and half-expected truth had come to possess her. Stranger even than the change in her face was the way in which she found Paul's hand and held it tenderly and warmly between her own. Never had the thrill of her entered into him as during these moments. He closed his hands tightly about hers. But he was looking at Carla!

Lucy-Belle sprang to her feet and drew Derwent after her.

"Let's not get sentimental!" she cried. "I'm going to throw all kinds of things down to my boa constrictor and see what he does with them. This to begin with—" and she flung out a paper plate which curved and circled, until, lighting gracefully upon the surface of the torrent below, it was caught like a feather and whipped with the speed of a bullet toward the maw of the gorge, without so much as getting its inner side wet.

Claire gave a gasp of amazement.

"I did not dream the water sped as swiftly as that!" she exclaimed. "But see! It is as I said! The plate is going—it has disappeared into the tunnel—and not once was it ruffled or upset. Back where the water is breaking and roaring it would have been destroyed."

"Wait!" said Derwent. He rolled the short log which they had used for a seat to the edge of the cliff, and with Paul's help tilted it on end and flung it over. "There goes a man," he laughed. "Now see what happens!"

They stood close to the sheer edge of the table rock and saw the log as it struck the water. There was an oily splash, and for a few yards the wood drifted away as smoothly as the plate had gone. A smile of triumph curved Claire's lips, then swiftly a frightened look gathered in its place. A hand had reached up, a terrible, unseen hand that had gripped the log like a living thing and dragged it down until no chip or shadow of it rode the liquid serpent under them.

"Hold your eyes near the rock!" commanded Derwent.

Breathlessly they watched. Half a minute later, as if spewed up by the monster who had swallowed it, the log reappeared near the huge fang which split the stream, struck against it, and climbed half its length out of the water, then sank back and disappeared again, this time to be seen no more.

"Gone," said Derwent. "And if you stood at the other end of the gorge five or six miles from here, you would never see that log come through. It is ground to pieces, goes out of existence in whatever there is between the walls of the chasm, which no man has ever explored, and none ever will. Are you satisfied?"

Claire was staring, wide-eyed.

"I believe it—now," she said.

Lucy-Belle had turned a little white.

"Still—I would jump in," she maintained, looking at Derwent.

Again Paul looked at Carla. The calm and placid beauty of her face seemed accentuated by what they had seen.

"And the wonder of it is there are so many who believe that Nature and God are not One!" she said, only for him. "Is it possible that in the blindness of our egoism we shall always fail to understand the significance of such things as that? It is a written word, in the hand of God, just as the Peribonka, with its gentleness and sunshine, is another and different message for us. That is what I believe."

Paul nodded. "So do I," he said, and felt the desire of all the world to take Carla's head against his breast and hold it there.

Guilt fastened itself upon him, and a little later, inspired by the sweetness of her manner toward him, he whispered to his wife: "Claire, you are wonderful! God knows I hope some day to make you happy!"

"You will," she answered, and the gentle mystery in her voice and eyes stirred him with a deep emotion.

Until the play grew tiresome they brought sticks and chunks of wood from the edge of the timber and fed them to the hidden hands of the stream. The result was always the same, except that chips and grass and very light pieces of wood raced swiftly and safely away, like the pasteboard plate, as if they were too insignificant to attract attention from below. But with the heavier objects there was a variation so small in what happened that the watchers on the rock were amazed and fascinated, and started a little game of guessing how many seconds would pass before Lucy-Belle's huge snake spat up an object and then swallowed it again.

To end their sport Paul and Derwent staggered from the edge of the timber with a forty-foot log, which had lain so long in the drying sun and wind that they could bear its weight on their shoulders, and before this was tossed over the five made their guesses, the loser to entertain the other four at dinner the next day.

Blue Paint Unpopular With Deep-Sea Sailors

Seafarers in general are emphatic in their dislike of blue paint on a vessel. It is a deep-rooted belief with them that bad luck will follow the use of the color. Twenty-five years or so ago the Donna Briggs, a little three-masted coasting schooner, was a familiar caller at ports between Nova Scotia and Boston. The men of the sea and ships declared that whenever she dropped anchor a storm followed. The schooner's hull was blue.

"I recall that a few years ago," said a Fulton Market fish dealer, "we engaged a Gloucester skipper to go down to a Maine port and bring back a schooner that had just been launched for us. When he found they had painted the hatches blue, he picked up his grip and started back for the railroad station."—New York Times.

LARGE TWIRLERS MACK'S WEAKNESS

Veteran Leader Can Never See Small Man on Mound.

Show Connie Mack a big pitcher and Connie will sign him forthwith. That is one of his weaknesses. Last summer Connie heard that there was a big moundsman working at the Benedictine college in Savannah. He stood 6 feet 3 inches, had reached the interesting age of nineteen years and tipped the scales at 185 pounds.

The veteran leader of the Mackmen, who never could see a small man working on the hill, did not ask what the big fellow had in the way of pitching stuff. His name is Reginald Baker, they told Connie, and he is this tall and that wide, indicating the physique of the hurler. "Sign him," said Connie, and the other day he joined the world's champions. He is so tall that his size alone impresses the sideliners. He has had a little experience in the pro ranks.

Good news for baseball hungry "kids."

As a part of an organized campaign to rewaken interest in baseball among boys, all major league clubs may permit them to see four or more games each week free during the 1930 season.

Chicago's major league clubs, the Cubs and White Sox, already have agreed to have four "kids' days" a week and may increase the bargain to every day except Sundays and holidays.

Lefty Grove is this year's highest priced baseball pitcher. He is to receive $25,000 for the year. Dazzy Vance, who received that amount last year, has taken a cut.

Old-time pitching stars didn't fare so well. Walter Johnson got $20,000 at the last. Christy Mathewson drew $12,000. Ed Walsh received $7,500.

Cornell and Yale boxing teams met at Ithaca, N. Y., recently in a seven-bout exhibition program in which no decisions were given, no knockdowns allowed and no team score compiled. It was the first boxing meet ever held under the auspices of the university.

Otto Vogel, former Illinois and Cub outfielder, who is baseball coach at Iowa, apparently retains his old slugging ability.

"High," replied Elmo, "and out of reach!"

If either Joe Boley at short or Max Bishop on second for the A's falter this year there is a youthful understudy waiting to break into the lineup. Connie Mack likes nineteen-year-old Debrill Williams at second and "My Boy" Eric McNair at short. Both came up from the South.

Forest Sackett, a twenty-year-old left-hander who has done well against the Tigers in exhibition games in the South, was purchased by the Evansville club for the highest price ever paid to the Tampa club for a ball player. Jack Kearns believes the present crop of heavyweights is the worst since the years immediately following the Johnson-Jeffries fight, when the entire world was busy trying to discover a white hope capable of regaining the championship from the Galveston stevedore.

Kearns thinks Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling are the best of the lot, the others being too small for good heavyweights or else lacking the punching ability needed for a real champion of the class.

The busiest second baseman in the National league last year was Fresco Thompson of the Phils. He had 395 putouts, 512 assists and made 33 errors.

Not since the famous Waners came up to make their marks in a big way have any pair of brothers broken into the baseball show as impressively as the Ferrell brothers—Wesley, pitching ace of the Cleveland Indians last season, and Richard, regarded by Manager Bill Killefer of the Browns as one of the greatest catching prospects to come up in years.

Wesley is the younger of the two, being twenty-two to Dick's twenty-four, but he also is bigger. The pitching half of the brother act is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds. Brother Dick weighs 170 and is 5 feet 11.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

GRUNTS

"What is bothering you?" asked Brother Bacon, who was taking a walk, and who had heard Pinky Pig grunting a good deal.

Brother Bacon's tail was curled in a funny little knot, and his snout was very muddy, as were his feet.

"Yes, what is bothering you?" asked Grandfather Porky Pig.

"We'd like to know," said their cousin, Miss Ham.

"You are always finding out something queer," she added.

"This is something I haven't found," said Pinky.

"You don't make yourself very clear," grunted Grandfather Porky.

"You don't give me a chance. You never do. Just because you know I am a bright pig you never give me a chance to finish anything I start to say.

"And you don't give me time to explain. It's most annoying."

"Now look here, Pinky," said Miss Ham, "you can't expect us to act as your mother does.

"She spoils you and tells you that you are clever. You are really not one scrap brighter than any other pig in the pen.

"You are simply a pig and at best pigs aren't the finest scholars in the world."

"Why should they be?" squealed Pinky.

"They shouldn't," said Miss Ham. "But you are forever pretending you are bright and clever—that's the part that is foolish."

"You stole my word," squealed Pinky.

"What word?" asked Miss Ham.

She looked about her as if she had stolen some food and not a word and was trying to see what she had done with it.

"In the very first place of all I said, 'It's so foolish,' and that was what I had said when you heard me grunting in the first place."

"What Is Bothering You?"

"Maybe so," said Porky. "Well, tell us what is foolish. I love foolish things."

"I don't love this," said Pinky.

"Hurry and tell us what it is," squealed Brother Bacon.

Pinky gave a grunt, squealed twice, and then began:

"I was trying to find some extra food and I couldn't, and I looked everywhere for some."

"Is that all the fuss is about?" asked Miss Ham.

"And that is what we've been waiting to hear?" asked Brother Bacon.

"Well, I never," said Sammy Sausage.

But Grandfather Porky said:

"Well, you must admit he's a true grandson of mine—a real pig.

"His only thoughts are about food, and he wanted to find some extra food.

"A noble pig is my dear grandson, Pinky Pig."

And all the pigs squealed, and then they all grunted, grunted, grunted:

"Well, he's a pig all right. That's so."

Dog's Sixth Sense

Some remarkable examples are given by the secretary of the National Canine Defense league, of the "sixth sense" in dogs. An airedale puppy, who was "boarded out" for some weeks while his mistress underwent an operation, on several occasions howled dismally for no apparent reason. The howlings, it was found, coincided exactly with certain crises in the illness of his mistress in a hospital miles away. He also tells of "Betty," an airedale of Allahabad, who, when out for a walk with her master, drove off a cobra, and paid for her devotion with her life.

What Am I?

An adjective, I, that am often applied
To a low country edging the sea.
I'm simple, I'm small, five letters in all—
Indeed, I am fashioned with three.
With three and with five, yet the very same word;
And harder to comprehend,
In the middle I've five, though it seems quite absurd,
And fifty at either end.
You'll find in my center a woman's name,
And, taking me left or right,
Backward or forward, I read the same,
And this you can prove on sight.

Answer—A level.

A NEEDLESS SACRIFICE

It is something of a shock to those of us who love and are proud of our state to discover from the statistics of the department of public health that California's death rate from accidental drowning is double that of the United States at large. In 1928 the rate in California was 14.2 deaths per 100,000 population, whereas the rate for the rest of the country was 7.1.

This does not mean that swimming and water sports are more hazardous in California than elsewhere. On account of the milder climate and the greater number of months each year in which swimming and bathing may be enjoyed, probably many more people go in the water in the course of a year than is customary in other states. It is not necessarily true that a larger number of deaths per the number of bathers occurs in California than in other sections of the country.

Nevertheless, the figure is startling enough to make us stop to consider just what it means. The Red Cross, which conducts first aid and life saving schools in various parts of the country each summer, estimates that 70 per cent of accidental drownings occur within thirty feet of shore, and that an even higher percentage of them are preventable. This needless waste of human life is a serious and tragic thing. Communities as well as individuals are responsible.

It is up to the individual who goes into the water to learn to swim competently and, having learned, to go further and acquire the technique needed to rescue another in difficulties. It is up to communities to see that our pools and beaches are properly supervised by thoroughly qualified life savers, that danger spots in beaches and rivers are plainly marked, that rescue equipment is close at hand. Until we have taken advantage of such training and facilities as are offered by organizations like the Red Cross we shall continue to sacrifice hundreds of lives each year.

THE TARIFF TRAIL

At last the Senate has passed a tariff bill, but that is only one more milestone on the long trail between the introduction of the bill and its final enactment into law.

The bill was passed by the House in May, 1929, but it was altered almost beyond recognition by the Senate, which made more than 1,200 changes in the proposed duty on various commodities. Besides, two important amendments were tacked on which are contrary to the wishes of President Hoover, one of which takes away the President's authority to raise or lower rates within certain limits, the other providing for the export debenture plan, which would give farmers a bounty on products exported to other countries.

The bill now goes to conference, where another lively fight is in prospect between Senate and House conferees. If they can not agree, the bill will be dead. Even if they agree, unless the measure as finally passed is acceptable to the President he may veto it.

It is doubtful that the fate of the bill will be known for several weeks. In the meantime, the uncertainty surrounding the matter is not doing business any good.

GLIDING AS A SPORT

Hundreds of Americans, and there will soon be thousands, are indulging in the fascinating sport of gliding. There are already more than 30 glider clubs in the United States, while as many more are being formed.

The glider, as nearly everyone knows, is a light flying machine without motors, the operator keeping it in the air for longer or shorter periods by taking advantage of the varying air currents. The start from the ground is thus described:

A dozen men run into the wind with a long rubber cable attached to the glider, while others hold the machine until the cable is stretched, and then let go. The operation is similar to that of getting a kite into the air. Sometimes automobles or even airplanes are used in launching the glider, which cuts loose when it reaches the desired altitude. Gliders are generally launched from the top of a hill, so that the beginner may make a gradual descent into the valley below.

Besides the atttractiveness of gliding as a mere sport, it is a most desirable preliminary to learning to operate motored airplanes. Some air transport lines require their pilots to have glider licenses in addition to those for the operation of airplanes.

With proper instruction, gliding can be learned with little risk, as first flights are made at a height of only 10 or 12 feet. Last year at one glider school 800 flights were made without injury to a single student.

A MUSEUM "NEWSPAPER"

What has been described as "a three-dimension scientific newspaper" is to be installed as a part of the new Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago, as an added attraction for visitors.

The enterprise is not a newspaper in the ordinary sense, but a collection of working models, maps and mechanical devices to illustrate human progress. The "newspaper" feature of the idea lies in the fact that exhibits will be changed or added to as new developments occur.

There will be, for example, a model of the proposed Nicaragua canal; another showing how the Sahara Desert might be caused to bloom through irrigation, an illustration of the proposed tunnel under the English Channel, and so on. Many new wonderful machines will be set up, some of them sliced in two, so that spectators may se their inner workings. Among the novelties will be a miniature coal mine, into which visitors may descend in a bucket to view the underground workings.

The new museum is made possible by an initial gift of $3,000,000 by Julius Rosenwald, famed merchant and philanthropist. The value of the enterprise, both from an entertainment and educational standpoint will undoubtedly be very great.

TO RESTORE OLD TOWN

Patrotic Americans will be glad to know that the historic old town of Williamsburg, Va., is to be restored to its appearance of Colonial days. The restoration is made possible through the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

There now remain in the town more than 40 public and private buildings which stood before the Revolution, and these have been bought up to be maintained as nearly as possible in their original condition.

Williamsburg was settled in 1632 and was the capital of Virginia from 1699 until 1780. Here was established in 1693 William and Mary College, the second oldest in the United States. America's first was built in the town in 1716.

The constitution of Virginia, the first written constitution of the New World, was adopted at Wlliamsburg in 1776. Here Patrick Henry made his famous speech in the house of burgesses, and here he and Thomas Jefferson served as governors of the state.

Important campaigns of the Revolution and Civil War centered about Williamsburg, and the town and vicinity are unusually rich in historic interest.

A LAWYER'S TRICK

In New York a 71-story building is nearing completion for Bank of Manhattan company, an institution whose history goes back almost to the foundation of the government. It is recalled by a recent writer that the institution resulted from the shrewd trick of a lawyer, who was none other than the notorious Aaron Burr.

At the time the bank was projected the group behind it were "in bad" politically and hence unable to obtain a bank charter. They organized a water company instead, but in drawing the charter Burr addded a clause permitting the company to engage also "in other necessary business." The other business was construed to include banking and it has been carried on ever since.

The new structure in Wall street adjoins the lot formerly occupied by Federal Hall, the first national capitol, where Washington took the oath of office as President. That tract is now the site of the sub-treasury.

If Aaron Burr and his associates could look upon the scene today they would marvel at the development which has resulted from their clever scheme for obtaining a bank charter.

FAST GERMAN SHIPS

Following closely upon the news of the record-breaking trans-Atlantic voyage of the German line Europa, which beat her sister ship Bremen's record by 18 minutes, comes the announcement that a merger of Germany's two largest steamship lines has been effected.

By the pooling of the interests of the North German Lloyd and Hapag lines, three-fourths of Germany's merchant marine come under one management. It appears that this combination will have the fastest ships afloat for both passenger and freight transportation.

The merger will do away with the former keen competition between German ships, and eliminate duplication of service to a certain extent. This will release a number of vessels for the establishment of new routes for world transportation.

This aggressive program seems likely to greatly increase German prestige on the seas, and will revive the question of whether, after all, Germany will not more rapidly recover from the economic effects of the World war than her conquerors.

GOOD NEWS

It is estimated that about 625,000 men will be put to work on road building throughout the United States this Spring. Expenditures for roads and streets are expected to reach two and a half billion dollars during 1930.

President Hoover has signed the bill appropriating $230,000,000 for new government buildings, about one-half of which will be spent in Washington and the other half throughout the country.

The public works program for the entire country this year is expected to involve the expenditure of about seven billion dollars.

After a national survey of business the New York World says: "Business in the United States, while spotty, has turned the corner; unemployment is on the wane; the trend of trade is definitely upward."

THE NOES HAVE IT

A deaf, dumb and blind Congressman could easily make an enviable record for being on the winning side by invariably voting "no" on all bills presented to the national legislature, according to a recent statement by Congressman Huddleston of Alabama.

Commenting on his suggestion, the Selma Times-Journal points out that only about one bill in 100 of those introduced in Congress is ever enacted into law. Therefore a robot Congressman committed to vote "no" on every proposal made would inevitably have a batting average of approximately 99 per cent.

It might be added that of the one per cent of bills actually passed and approved by the President a fairly large portion would be eliminated without any material damage to the country at large.

"THE NEW MOON," OPERETTA SUCCESS, AT THE CURRAN

Opening Easter Sunday night, April 20, at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, Lillian Albertson and Louise O. Macloon will present "The New Moon," the first big New York and London operetta success that has been presented in San Francisco in over a year.

"The New Moon" is the romantic title given to the thrilling story written by Frank Mandel, the San Francisco author, with Oscar Hammerstin II, but once again much credit for its success must go to Sigmund Romberg, who has again composed many immortal melodies headed by "Lover, Come Back to Me."

"The New Moon" comes direct from ten capacity weeks at the Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, and marks the first production under the banner of Albertson-Macloon since their famous "Desert Song" presentation. Once again Perry Askam will head the cast and this time the leading lady will be beautiful Josephine Houston, of whom all Hollywood film producers have been raving and making the Macloons fabulous offers for her services.

With its scenes laid in the French colonies during the times of Louis XVI, it presents its hero as a French nobleman who has sold himself as a bond-servant in order to forestall the vengence of his king against whom he has rebelled. Falling in love with the daughter of the man to whom he is in bondage is the start of the romantic episodes of the production.

Perry Askam, star of "The Desert Song," has the swaggering role of the pseudo-bondservant, singing the beautiful songs of Sigmund Romberg to his leading lady, Josephine Houston, a "discovery" of Lillian Albertson's. Miss Houston possesses a lovely soprano voice and a charming personality, and is winning new followers at every performance. It is the opinion of Louis O. Macloon that she will go far in her work.

The company numbers one hundred, with Charles Boyle and Dee Loretta cast in the chief comedy roles. Others in the list of principals include David Deese, John Merkyl, Gary Breckner, Myrtis Crinley, John Wagner, Howard Nugent, Edd Russell and Violet Derbeck.

A male chorus of forty voices and Cecil Stewart's orchestra furnishing the musical atmosphere are additional enhancing highlights.

TO SCRAP OLD CARS

Automobile manufacturers of the United States have set aside $15,000,000 to be expended in scrapping 400,000 unsafe cars this year in the interest of highway safety.

It is declared that one of the serious hazards of the highway situation has been the rattle-trap car which is fished out of the scrapheap and put on the road to menace its own occupants and others. Under the new plan these vehicles will be taken in and demolished, so that they can not possibly be used again.

While the plan is undoubtedly in the interest of public safety, it is considered that it will also be a good business move for the manufacturers, as it will create a market for more new cars.

Marjorie Best, 3, won a silver championship cup almost as large as herself in a swimming carnival contest at Bellair, Fla.

George Graham, 10, traveled alone from his former home in Hungary to join his mother in Dayton, O., after a separation of eight years.

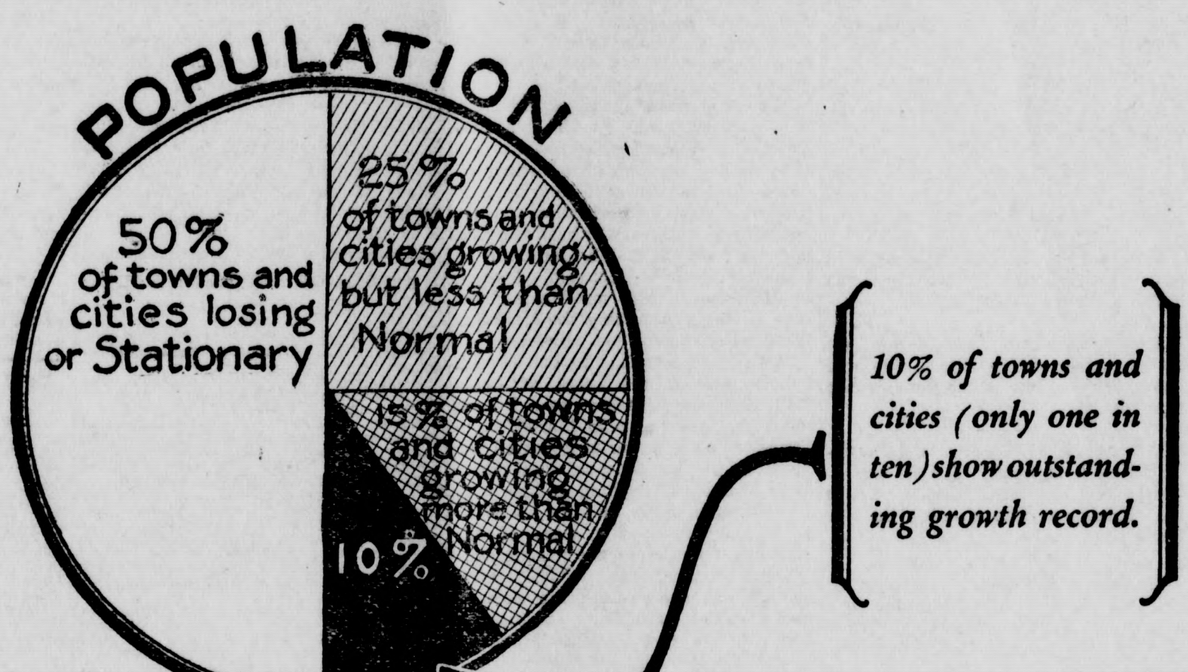
One In Ten . . .



POPULATION
50% of towns and cities losing or Stationary
25% of towns and cities growing- but less than Normal
15% of towns and cities growing more than Normal
10%
10% of towns and cities (only one in ten) show outstanding growth record.

Fifty per cent of the towns and cities in the United States are either stationary or are showing an actual population loss.

Seventy-five per cent of the towns and cities are falling below the normal rate of population increase.

Population isn't everything! A Community cannot be judged entirely by the number of its inhabitants. But—there is such a thing as Community "dry rot," and loss of population is the last stage in the decline or decay of a Community. The danger signals presaging this final stage, are:—lessened interest, decreasd loyalty and the falling-off of business.

Every family less in a Community represents a yearly money loss of about $2,000.

Towns and cities today stand or fall on their merits—the margin of safety is small. There is no element of chance or luck—it is reduced to a definite science. And the Community that drops behind soon finds itself out of the race entirely.

Community Competition is not a myth. All members of the Community feel this new type of competition; therefore all local interests must stand or fall together.

A chain can be no stronger than its weakest link—a Community can be no stronger than the weakest factor in its Community Organization. A weakness or defect in the Community structure brings about a decline. The fall is more rapid than the rise.

Emergencies exist! Changing times—wider contacts—greater competition—have brought greater problems, but they have brought greater opportunities as well.

Shall we, as a city, reach out and grasp these limitless opportunities?

FORTUNE IS WAITING FOR "ONE IN TEN" COMMUNITIES!

Are We That One?

Expert investigation has pointed out the way—local planning based on national experience. Next week this page will take up the most essential factor in this program for

COMMISSION FAVORS THE WESTERN PACIFIC

Arthur T. George, attorney for the railroad commission, has departed for Washington, D. C., for the purpose of arguing before the Interstate Commerce Commission in support of the application of the Western Pacific and Great Nothern railroads for authority to build a 200-mile connecting line between Klamath Falls in Oregon, and Keddie in Plumas county. The railroad commission intervened in favor of this application, holding that it would be to the interest of California for a second and competitive railroad line to be built, which would connect the great northwest area with California.

Prior to the hearing, conducted on the application of the Western Pacific and Great Northern railroad, which were held before Examiner Mahaffey of the Interstate Commerce Commission in San Francisco, the railroad commission instructed its chief engineer, A. G. Mott, to make an extensive investigation into the merits of the proposed rail project. As the result of this investigation the commission intervened in support of the project and placed its chief engineer on the witness stand for the purpose of presenting elaborate studies showing the advantages that would accrue to the shippers of California, and the public generally, if the proposed line were built.

Chief Engineer Mott pointed out, with supporting data, that there is no other comparable situation in the United States where two such important sections as California and the Pacific Northwest are connected by rail lines under the control of a single agency (Southern Pacific Company).

Mr. George presented the argument of the California Railroad Commission before the Interstate Commerce Commission sitting en banc in Washington on April 16.

HEALDSBURG PIONEER'S TELEPHONE EXPERIENCE

P. J. Ferguson, of Healdsburg, is a true California pioneer. As a boy, he sold candy to the miners in the gambling halls of Marysville, when that community was wide open and shootings were frequent. He was known as the "candy-stick boy." Whenever guns were drawn and trouble seemed imminent, the first cry was, "Look out for the candy-stick boy!" Mr. Ferguson remembers this as vividly as he does experiences while crossing the plains in 1849. More than that, he remembers his sensations, upon using the telephone for the first time, in 1878, just a year or two after Alexander Graham Bell's discovery.

Mr. Ferguson, now 86, recounts the telephone episode as follows:

"The pair of telephones, which I helped try out, belonged to James Coey, then postmaster of San Francisco. One instrument was located in the postoffice and the other in his home. Several friends were present when I lifted the wooden-cased transmitter and receiver to talk to Mrs. Coey.

"After thumping the transmitter membrane sharply to atract the attention of someone at the other end of the line, I placed the device to my ear. A remarkably clear voice responded. Then I spoke into the transmitter, introducing myself to Mrs. Coey. It was difficult for me to realize that a woman's voice was coming to me over the wire, and I suspected that I was being made the victim of a hoax. Mrs. Coey, when I mentioned these suspicions, became indignant. In fact, my apparent lack of tact caused her to hang up on me. Probably she was the lady who set the precedent for young ladies to hang up, while a man is trying to explain a difficult situation over the telephone. I felt badly about the incident and persuaded Mr. Coey to get her back on the line. This he did. After a few minutes the trouble was smoothed out and we continued our conversation.

"It was Mrs. Coey who suggested that we sing something over the telephone. I sang a pretty good tenor in those days, being only 33 at the time. Mr. Coey had a resounding bass. His wife sang a beautiful soprano. A friend of Mrs. Coey's whose name I have forgotten, sang alto. Therefore, we had a perfect quartette. We sang a number of the old favorites, which are still remembered for their beauty. I will say that the harmony was excellent, and those at the other end of the line could be heard very well. That, I firmly believe, was the first time a quartette sang over so great a distance—three miles in both directions. It was with regret that we hung up the receiver after the concert and made our way homeward.

"Little did we realize, fifty-two years ago, that the small instrument on the wall would grow to the gigantic industry which is today's telephone system. I didn't imagine, as we sang that afternoon, that I would see the day when it would be possible to transmit voices across the continent and by radio to millions of telephones in Europe, Canada, Mexico and South America.

A sorry tune can usually get by if it is called a theme song.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

In October, two plantings of striped bass was made in the Salton Sea. The second plant appears to have been made with perfect success. The fish arrived from Tracy, California, after twenty-four hours on the road and one hour later were investigating their new home.

A flat bottomed boat equipped with an airplane motor, airplane propellor and aerial rudder and made to skim over the shallow water with considerable speed, materially aided in getting the bass to the planting grounds with all dispatch.

To guard against the predatory sea birds which haunt the great inland sea, the fish are planted in fairly deep water.

The plants came as the result of an investigation made by Biologist George A. Coleman. Striped bass have never before been introduced into a landlocked sea, but conditions are such that the experiment was believed to be practicable.

Those who have experienced the thrill of catching the fish claim it is a bold biter and altogether a wonderful game fish.

Montana has recently legislated against the use of salmon eggs, real or imitations, as bait for trout.

The new law was placed upon the statute books as the result of concerted action on the part of sportsmen who realized that the continued use of salmon eggs threatened their future sport.

The act applies only to the streams of the state, but it is probable that its provisions will be extended to lakes at the next session of the legislature.

During the months of August, September and October, fifty mountain lions were reported killed. Of these, twelve were killed in August, seventeen in September and twenty-one in October. This makes the kill for the ten months of 1929, 272, which is just two less than the same period in 1928.

Forest Ranger William Spargo at Winthrop, Squaw Creek, reports at least 500 elk in this district at present. He says they are somewhat scattered, some ranging as far south as Grizzly Peak and some as far north as McCloud Flats.

Forty head are also reported in one herd fifteen miles south of the Pit River. There are more calves this year than ever before and the animals are reported to be in good shape.

A deer hunting license tag, No. 85518, discloses that P. B. Pugh, of Tipton, Tulare county, California, killed a mule deer at 7 A. M. on October 13 in Big Meadows. The animal was a female, yet possessed symmetrical antlers having an eleven-inch spread. The antlers were perfectly forked on both sides.

Additional information secured from the hunter shows that the deer had every appearance of a buck to the hunter. It was the same color as bucks in the region in October. Its hoofs on close examination were those of a buck.

KILLINGS IN THE U. S.

Reports available so far indicate that the appalling homicide rate in the United States continued to rise during 1929, reaching 10.5 per 100,000 of population in 141 of the largest cities.

Southern cities show the largest number of homicides in proportion to population as they have consistently done for several years, Memphis again leading all cities of the country with 66.8 killings per 100,000. Birmingham follows with 51.3; Atlanta is third with 51.0 and Jacksonville is fourth with 46.9 per 100,000.

Chicago, in spite of its reputation for violence, showed only 12.7, while New York had but 7.1 homicides per 100,000.

All these figures are in marked and unfavorable contrast with those of other countries. For example, Canada has 1.7 and England and Wales only 0.5 homicides per 100,000 of population, while the average for the whole United States is about 8.8.

Among the causes to which observers attribute the prevalence of killings in America are the gun-toting habit, organized crime in connection with prohibition violations, and laxity in punishment. But no one seems to know how to remedy the stuation.

CHILDREN ENJOY SHOW AS GUESTS OF P. T. A.

Last Saturday afternoon the General Pershing P. T. A. gave a theatre party to the pupils of the school. By 1:30 over two hundred kiddies were gathered at the school building, where several mothers were waiting to take them to the Daly City Theatre.

At the appointed time they marched in pairs, with the mothers keeping a close guard over them. An officer in a machine accompanied the marchers, and waited at each street crossing to see that all crossed in safety.

The children were unusually well-behaved for such a large crowd, and they were so thrilled at seeing the pictures in the company of their little friends and playmates.

After the show they were given an additional treat of ice cream and cakes. The theatre management very kindly offered the use of the vacant store next door to the theatre, where the children were served the refreshments.

After every one had received their share an officer again conducted them safely across Mission street, and the mothers took them back to school, where the left for home, saying they had had the best time ever.

The members of the P. T. A. wish to thank the police force, the theatre management and the mothers who so generously aided in making the party an unforgettable affair in the minds of the kiddies.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 3 FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1930 NUMBER 38

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"Yeh," mourned the old-timer, dining in a restaurant, "yeh, this is a spring chicken all right. I just bit into one of the springs."

More Whispers

You've heard much about "whispering" campaigns. To husbands, we want to whisper these gift suggestions for wives: Breakfast nook, colonial china cabinets, and built-in ironing boards and bookcases. If you order now, you will have them in plenty of time before the anniversary, and we'll keep the secret, too.

Fatal

"Just think, every time I breathe somebody dies."

"Better try Listerine."

Live Wire Daughter

"Say, Mose, howcum you name dat gal 'Lectricity?"

"Well, you see, Sam, mah wife's name am Dinah, and mine's Mose, and dynamos makes 'lectricity; so us jes named ouh little gal 'Lectricity."

Impossible

"I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club this afternoon," said Mrs. Garrulous to her husband the other evening.

With a look of astonishment he replied: "I can't believe it, my dear. Who outspoke you?"

Over the Phone: "Do you have Prince Albert in a can?"

Service: "Yes, sir, we do."

O. T. P.: "Let him out."

Roofing Materials, Shingles, Etc. Now is the time to get ready for the rain.

It's the little things in lift that tell," said the co-ed as she yanked her kid brother from under the sofa.

There's a reason why Aberdeen satisfies.

Stung Again

Aviator: Wan'na fly?"

Friend (rather anxiously): "Sure thing."

Aviator: "All right. Just wait till I catch one for you."

A man who is clever enough to be boss at home is also wise enough not to brag about it.
